

THE CRIMINAL COURT.

The Hartford Courant (1887-1922); Sep 23, 1908;

ProQuest Historical Newspapers Hartford Courant (1764 - 1922)

pg. 4

THE CRIMINAL COURT.

Business of September Term Finished and Court Adjourned.

Thomas Condos, who conducted a candy store in this city and who was arrested for keeping open his store on Sunday, was put on trial before Judge William L. Bennett and a jury in the superior criminal court yesterday. He was defended by James J. Quinn and Samuel C. Kone, and State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn prosecuted. The jury was out about ten minutes and reported a verdict of guilty. Judge Bennett imposed a fine of $25 and costs on the accused.

The other Sunday store openers who had been arrested for the offense then entered pleas of guilty and were each fined $25 and costs. They were Arthur King, Gustavus Condos, George Cramer and James Trantl Polorias.

James Condos is now out of the state and Mr. Quinn said he would be in court at the next term, and the case against W. H. H. Mason, a Windsor druggist, charged with keeping open on Sunday, was continued to the next term of the court.

James H. Warner, charged with failing to support his wife, gave a bond to provide her $3.50 a week for six months.

Jennie DeHoney, charged with theft from the person, entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced to jail for one year.

Michael Cannon, charged with entering a railroad car, was sentenced to jail for six months.

Howard Campbell, a minor, for burglary, was sentenced to jail for two years.

John Grill and Peter Heseinah, charged with burglary at Max Roth's saloon, were each sentenced to jail for one year on pleas of guilty.

The term of the court was adjourned yesterday afternoon without day, the business of the term having been finished.